

Clean Air. Clear Roads. Ride On.

How Can You Help Keep Park City Great?

Make small changes to the way you travel to help reduce cars on the road and create a more enjoyable Park City. Read on for a few examples of things you can do to keep our air clean and our roads clear.

Trip Chain

Trip Chaining is a hassle-free way to get around Park City and can be used in your everyday life. Trip chaining is simply grouping your errands or activities together into one trip. It takes a little planning, but it's easy to do.

For example: if you have to go to the dry cleaner, the grocery store and the bank, visit each place—one after the other—rather than making separate trips.

Consolidating several individual trips into one grouped trip can save you time and reduces the number of cars on the road, which ultimately makes it easier for everyone to get around Park City.

Carpool

Carpooling is a great way to reduce trips while commuting to and from work, going to events, taking kids to school or practices or even going skiing or snowboarding. It requires some coordination of schedules, but it can be a fun and easy way to get around.

Carpooling can also save money on gas and car maintenance. Plus, you can spend more time with friends or family. Carpooling means fewer cars on the road, which makes traveling easier for everyone.

Adjust Travel Times

During busy ski days or special events, traffic congestion is at its peak. Adjusting your schedule on these days can help save you time and frustration. It's as easy as planning ahead and staying an hour later or leaving an hour early to avoid traveling when roads are most congested. This could mean staying on the mountain after a day of skiing to enjoy dinner, or leaving work an hour earlier to avoid the rush.

Making small adjustments to the times you travel can have a big impact on the number of cars on Park City roads and make your day a little easier.
